Inter Faith Learning, Dialogue and Cooperation: Next Steps

The Inter Faith Network for the United Kingdom
The Inter Faith Network for the UK

The Inter Faith Network for the UK (IFN) was founded in 1987 to “advance public knowledge and mutual understanding of the teachings, traditions and practices of the different faith communities in Britain, including an awareness both of their distinctive features and their common ground and to promote good relations between persons of different faiths.”

IFN’s role is unique: linking national faith community representative bodies, local, regional and national inter faith organisations, and academic and educational bodies with a focus on inter faith or multi-faith issues and working with them to deepen inter faith understanding and cooperation. One of IFN’s best known programmes is Inter Faith Week.

IFN carries out its work through raising awareness within wider society of the importance of inter faith issues, creating opportunities for linking and sharing good practice, and providing advice and information to help the development of new inter faith initiatives and the strengthening of existing ones. Working with its nearly 200 member bodies is an important part of this. Each of those makes its own contribution to inter faith understanding and cooperation in the UK.

IFN works for the public benefit and its work is wide ranging, touching the lives of many thousands of people directly, and through the organisations and initiatives with which it engages.

Foreword

The increasing religious diversity of the UK and our interconnected lives here and globally mean that inter faith understanding and cooperation are becoming ever more important. They are a vital part of living together well and developing as a harmonious and integrated society.

Inter faith discussion and learning is also important for those within religious traditions and those of non-religious beliefs because it is part of coming to an understanding about how our own teachings, practices and understandings of truth may relate to those of others.

If you are reading this booklet you may be someone whose experiences have prompted you to get involved, or further involved, in inter faith learning, discussion or practical cooperation.

The booklet is designed to help you along the way. It is not an exhaustive resource and cannot capture everything but aims to offer pointers to assist. We are grateful to the member bodies of IFN for their assistance in its development. In its pages you will find out about how you can become more involved and the opportunities for conversation, exploration and cooperation. Although it is primarily aimed at individuals there is a page for organisations and the IFN office will be glad to assist with further queries.

We hope that you will find this resource a useful and practical way of getting involved in the vital process of creating bonds of friendship, understanding, trust and cooperation between people of different backgrounds across the UK.

Using this booklet

Terminology

In this short booklet the term ‘inter faith’ is used. It describes interactions or learning between people of different faiths, and in some cases between those of religious and non-religious beliefs. The term ‘multi faith’ is used here for ‘side-by-side’ engagement.

‘Inter faith’ discussion often seeks to establish areas of agreement but the term ‘inter faith’ is not used here to imply lessening the distinctiveness of traditions.

At some points in the booklet the term ‘dialogue’ is used. This term is used here to refer to conversation which is a mutually respectful exploration of views with the hoped for outcome of greater understanding.

The contents of this booklet

The first section provides information about various ways in which you might get involved in inter faith conversation, learning or multi faith social action, as well as the kinds of bodies that might be helpful to contact, and the activities and resources they are likely to provide.

A list of IFN’s National Faith Community Representative member bodies, and their web addresses, is included in the final section, along with short profiles and contact details for its member National and Regional Inter Faith Organisations and Educational and Academic Bodies. The over 250 local inter faith organisations are too numerous to list here and so details on how to find and contact these are provided through the local inter faith locator on IFN’s website.

At the back there is a chart providing an at a glance overview of aspects of inter faith activity covered by IFN’s member National and Regional Inter Faith Organisations and Educational and Academic Bodies, to help the reader find out who to contact depending on their interests.

The story of this resource

This resource has been developed in the context of Inter Faith Week. Every year thousands of people meet and take part in projects with people of different faiths and beliefs – many for the first time. This resource points to the ‘next steps’ that people can take after Inter Faith Week – or at any time – if they are interested in inter faith dialogue, learning and multi faith cooperation.
How do I...?

The Inter Faith Network office receives enquiries from a wide variety of people about inter faith engagement and learning. For example:

- I’m an active member of my local faith community but I’ve never really thought much about how my faith relates to other people’s. How can I explore this?

- Inter faith groups were mentioned on the radio the other day. How do I get involved with one in my area? Is there one?

- I don’t consider myself religious but I would like to find out more about different religions and beliefs.

- Our mosque is thinking about what it can do to get involved in building links with other faith communities locally. What might be some helpful steps to take?

- I’m particularly interested in dialogue with other women. Is there an opportunity for this where I live?

- I would like to know more about dialogue between the non-Abrahamic traditions – how might I do that?

- I am particularly interested in a specific form of dialogue – are there programmes for this?

- I want to study inter faith issues in an educational or academic context – how do I find out about courses?

Events and projects

“I am interested just in occasional opportunities to attend events or join in projects. What might I do?”

Find out what inter faith events are going on in your area. Check out the following places where listings can be found:

- The website of the Inter Faith Network for the UK www.interfaith.org.uk and IFN’s e-bulletin www.interfaith.org.uk/e-bulletin
- The Inter Faith Week website – for a wide range of events each November www.interfaithweek.org
- The website of the nearest local inter faith group to you – see the local inter faith locator at www.interfaith.org.uk/locator
- Websites such as Eventbrite, where an increasing number of inter faith events are listed: www.eventbrite.co.uk
- The internet – search ‘inter faith’, ‘interfaith’, ‘interreligious’ and ‘inter religious’ and similar terms
- Twitter and Facebook
- The website of your local radio station – it may have a regular faith-related weekly programme. Many often carry inter faith stories and publicity for forthcoming inter faith events. These can often be downloaded for ease of listening.

“In Wales, our inter faith engagement has always had a strong quality of relationality. Understanding and cooperation flourish when we develop these through encounter, conversation and friendship. For anyone wanting to become more involved, finding places and people to share the journey and the conversation and to work together is very important.”

Online resources

There are a number of helpful online resources that can help you to find out about the aspects of inter faith engagement before you take your interests further.

A good place to start is the IFN website: www.interfaith.org.uk. Here you will find numerous resources, guides and information on inter faith dialogue, including reports from our events, national meetings and the IFN code on Building Good Relations.

If you are interested in resources provided by IFN’s member bodies, contact details for these can be found at www.interfaith.org.uk/members.

In addition, most of IFN’s member bodies have an active presence on social media, and this can be a good way to get involved in inter faith activity for the first time. You can find Facebook and Twitter pages for our member bodies through IFN’s Facebook page at www.facebook.com/ifnetuk or our Twitter feed @IFNetUK. If you are a Twitter user, you can find a list of our member bodies with a Twitter feed by visiting @IFNetUK and clicking on ‘Lists’.

If you are in Scotland, visit the Interfaith Scotland website, which has a page dedicated to online resources: www.interfaithscotland.org/resources

The website of the Northern Ireland Inter-Faith Forum also carries some resources: www.niinterfaithforum.org

Getting involved locally

A good place to find out more and get involved in inter faith activity may be your local inter faith group. There are now over 250 of these in the UK. They play a very important role in creating opportunities for learning and cooperation in their local communities.

Local inter faith organisations usually have a diverse membership drawn from their areas. All welcome enquirers and offer a variety of ways that people can get involved, from attending meetings to volunteering and helping with aspects of their work.

Local inter faith organisations vary in their activities. They may:

- Hold discussions and talks where participants can learn about different faith perspectives and discuss topics from faith to social issues
- Provide information to people about inter faith activity in their areas, advertise events and connect people
- Arrange visits to local places of worship where people of different faiths can learn about each other’s beliefs, practices and communities
- Put on special events such as ‘faith walks’ to different places of worship in their areas
- Work to help tackle tensions and hate incidents and educate against prejudice
- Help with civic events and ceremonies for events and programmes such as Remembrance Sunday or Inter Faith Week
- Take part in or run social action projects to help the local community – for example where people of different faiths help provide meals or shelter for the homeless
- Hold social events
- Provide speakers for schools
- Act as a consultation point for the local authority and other public agencies on matters relating to faith communities, alongside direct consultation by these bodies with individual communities
- Arrange programmes or events with and/or for young people or women

To get in touch with your local inter faith group or to find out more, visit the Local Inter Faith Locator on IFN’s website at www.interfaith.org.uk/locator, where you will be able to find the group closest to where you live. Alternatively, call the IFN office on 020 7730 0410, or email ifnet@interfaith.org.uk, where someone will be happy to help.

If you live in Scotland, visit the local inter faith page of Interfaith Scotland at www.interfaithscotland.org/interfaith-groups.

If there is not a local inter faith group within your area, perhaps you can help set one up. The Local Inter Faith Guide contains helpful guidance. It can be downloaded from www.interfaith.org.uk/lifguide
“Local inter faith groups bring people from different faiths and cultures together, often for the first time, to celebrate the positive work faith groups bring to our communities. It is so important for inter faith groups to provide these safe spaces for people to meet and grow to know and understand others from different backgrounds, communities and faiths, as well as doing good in their communities.”

NORTHAMPTON INTER FAITH FORUM

Visiting places of worship

Many local inter faith groups organise visits to local places of worship, and this can be a good way of getting involved in inter faith activity for the first time. This either takes the form of specific visits to individual places of worship, or can be undertaken as part of a ‘faith trail’, where many places of worship are visited in a single day. Visiting a place of worship allows those interested to talk to people of other faiths and beliefs in their own environment. Your local inter faith group will be happy to help you find out how to arrange a visit to a local place of worship.

“Local inter faith groups carry the enthusiasm of people wanting to understand their own faith better as well as know the faith of others better. Over time such people become true friends and create the social glue that builds relations across difference. They make society a good place in which to live well together.”

DEVON FAITH AND BELIEF FORUM

“It is incredibly important for people of all faiths and none to get to understand and respect the beliefs of others. Respecting others helps in building a society where everyone is valued. The first step in this process is meeting people or visiting a place of worship and seeing and hearing how others try to find God and how their beliefs and practices are incredibly precious to them.”

LANCASHIRE FORUM OF FAITHS

“When the Northern Ireland Inter-Faith Forum started up in the early 1990s, one of the first things we did was to visit each other’s places of worship as a group. Such visits were very rare in Northern Ireland at that time, but it helped to cement the group and build personal and communal relationships. Some 20 years later we repeated the exercise, in a programme that lasted just over a year, drawing in some new members and sharing perspectives on our faiths. On both occasions we broke through some of the barriers and mystique around our different traditions and practices.”

Faith organisations

If you are already an active member of a faith community or are affiliated to a faith community, you may be interested to know what your community is doing at a local or national level and to become involved. Many local faith organisations and places of worship, and the national bodies that represent them, actively engage with other faith groups to further good inter faith relations. The best way to find out about what is happening at a local level is to speak to someone in your own community.

National Faith community bodies in each of the nations of the UK offer another important resource.

The ways in which these bodies engage with inter faith dialogue differs depending on their perspectives on the issues and, on the resources they have available and their type of structure. They may:

- Have a programme or division which handles inter faith issues
- Support or advise their local bodies on these matters
- Offer advice and give contact details for those that will be of further help
- Provide information on relevant publications and other resources
- Organise occasional relevant meetings for interested members of their community
- Liaise with their international community structures on inter faith issues

To get in touch with the relevant national body of your faith community, ask at your place of worship or in your community which one is most relevant and how best to contact them. Or you can contact IFN and its office may be able to assist.

Many National Faith Community Representative Bodies are in membership of IFN. Their website details can be found at the back of this booklet and on the IFN website at www.interfaith.org.uk/nfcrbs.
Ways to get involved

Making use of centres, national initiatives and educational resources

There are a number of national and regional inter faith organisations as well as educational and academic bodies with an inter faith focus that offer ways for individuals to get involved in their activities.

Centres and places to visit

Some inter faith and multi faith bodies have centres that are open to those who would like to visit. If you are interested, check the chart at the back of this booklet to see which may be in your area. Some of these centres include libraries and other useful resources.

Opportunities for learning

An increasing number of bodies now run courses about dialogue and about faiths and social issues, working together with people of different faiths and beliefs. These might include training sessions about conflict resolution, or more informal discussions between members of different faiths. The chart at the back of this booklet will give you an idea of which IFN member bodies provide these courses. Alternatively, many Educational and Academic member bodies produce resources about inter faith dialogue and activity, and these can often be found online for download. The chart at the end of the book indicates which IFN member bodies provide these.

Bilateral dialogue

If you are interested in inter faith activity and dialogue between members of two specific faiths, then a number of IFN’s member bodies may be able to help. This is sometimes referred to as ‘bilateral’ dialogue. A number of IFN’s member bodies have this as their primary focus or a very important part of their work. The chart at the end of the book gives more detail.

“Bilateral dialogue is particularly important in allowing those from two initial perspectives to explore together issues either of special relevance or in greater depth than wider conversations allow.”

COUNCIL OF CHRISTIANS AND JEWS

Multi faith dialogue

Some organisations encourage and support dialogue involving many traditions, either by focusing on a specific set of issues or working to promote their aims through dialogue and campaigning. If you are interested in this kind of multi faith dialogue, a number of IFN’s member organisations may be of interest to you. Member organisations involved in multi faith dialogue can be found in the chart at the back of this booklet.
For further details look at the websites of the organisations identified as having individual membership at the back of this guide and contact them to explore what they have to offer. You can find a full list of IFN’s member National and Regional Inter Faith Organisations and Educational and Academic bodies towards the back of this resource or on our website at www.interfaith.org.uk/members. Alternatively, call the IFN Office on 020 7730 0410 or email ifnet@interfaith.org.uk where someone will be happy to help.

Academic study of religion

If you are interested in studying religions, including inter faith relations, in an academic context, many institutions of higher education provide courses.

“It is vital that we better understand the challenges and complexities surrounding religion and belief both within and between faith communities. As such, it is hard to think of a time when the academic study of inter faith understanding and inter faith dialogue has been more important for our society and collective futures.”

WOOLF INSTITUTE
Ways to get involved

Social action

Serving others is an imperative of the teachings of all faith communities as well as the principles of many with non-religious ethical beliefs.

Faith communities run many social action programmes and make a major difference through volunteering in their communities.

Often different faith groups work together on social action projects. Taking part in such projects can be a great way to help the local community and at the same time get to know people of different backgrounds.

Here are some of the ways that faiths work together, sometimes through local inter faith bodies, on local social action projects:

- Improving public spaces, for example by cleaning graffiti, litter-picking in a local park or tree-planting
- Working together to tackle hate crime or other social problems affecting people in local communities
- Organising a support network to help refugees and migrants in need
- Joining with healthcare professionals to run health awareness days
- Organising fundraisers for local, national or international causes
- Collaborating locally or nationally as part of larger, coordinated campaigns relating to humanitarian issues, such as famine relief or debt reduction
- Holding a joint event on an issue currently affecting the local community

Three special days

- ‘Mitzvah Day’ (www.mitzvahday.org.uk) is a Jewish-led day of social action which encourages inter faith involvement. The objective is to encourage people to give their time, rather than their money, to worthwhile local causes, whilst also creating deeper linkages within communities and supporting charities.
- Sadaqa Day (www.mysadaqaday.org) is a day of social action led by the Muslim community for individuals, community groups, mosques, women’s groups, schools and families. Organisations and individuals from other faiths have also joined in.
- Sewa Day (www.sewaday.org) is an international day of social action where people come together to do good in their communities. The term ‘sewa’ is rooted in the dharmic traditions; the involvement is wider.

If you are interested in such initiatives, you could contact your local faith or inter faith organisation, or organisations and programmes which encourage and support cross-faith community social action projects.
The Near Neighbours programme, an initiative of the Church Urban Fund with the Archbishops’ Council, with support from the Department for Communities and Local Government, helps bring together people from diverse communities to improve their neighbourhoods and administers a grant programme which supports this.

Faith Action is a network of faith-based and community organisations serving their communities by delivering public services.

The Faith Based Regeneration Network is a network for community development, social action, community organising and regeneration in a multi faith context.

Citizens UK organises communities to act together for social justice and the common good and describes itself as the “home of community organising in the UK, with diverse civil society.”

“Sewa loosely translates to ‘selfless service’. On Sewa Day people of different backgrounds come together to volunteer to make a difference in local communities – for example, helping in old people’s homes, homeless shelters, and schools in disadvantaged areas, and in environmental projects such as canal cleaning. It’s open to anyone to volunteer and it is a great way to get to know people of different faiths while contributing to the wellbeing of others.”

SEWA DAY
“To work together means understanding each other’s beliefs which we do by discussion and dialogue. This must be done in safety without fear of being forced to accept the beliefs as your faith. Inter faith encounter is the vehicle to do this. It is usually local – city, borough – and seeks to encourage conversation between faiths in an enclosed or public environment. In this scenario, friendships are made and the group often turns outward into the community to address our challenges.”

WELWYN HATFIELD INTER FAITH GROUP

If you are interested in getting involved in social action in an inter faith or multi faith context, then there are a number of things that you can do. You may find helpful a short toolkit produced by Near Neighbours with the Inter Faith Network all about getting involved in and starting local inter faith social action projects www.cuf.org.uk/nn-resources

Contact Near Neighbours, FaithAction, the Faith-based Regeneration Network or Citizens UK (www.cuf.org.uk/near-neighbours; www.faithaction.net; www.fbrn.org.uk; www.citizensuk.org) to get involved in national social action projects.

To see what is happening in your local area, contact your local inter faith group, which can be found on the IFN website at www.interfaith.org.uk/locator. Alternatively contact the IFN Office on 020 7730 0410 or email ifnet@interfaith.org.uk, where someone will be happy to help.

“The challenges we face today have to be tackled by working together – no individual group can accomplish this without the help of others. Social action is a great way for people of different faiths to come together and cooperate, including those that have not been involved in inter faith activity before. By helping others in the community, we can create lasting partnerships and come to appreciate that a multi faith society is an asset.”

Ways to get involved

Youth inter faith engagement

If you are a young person, there are a number of ways to begin getting involved in inter faith activity that may be of interest.

There are a wide variety of initiatives that focus on inter faith engagement between young people. Young people are engaging in inter faith activity amongst themselves, and some national and local inter faith organisations are actively engaging with young people and providing spaces for them to talk in an inter faith context.

Here are some pointers for getting involved:

• If you are at university or in further education, contact your Student Union, faith or belief society, or chaplaincy

Many Student Unions encourage inter faith engagement, as well as aiming to support the needs of the students from different faith backgrounds. Faith or belief societies are increasingly involved in inter faith activity, dialogue and social action on campus. Chaplaincies often support students in inter faith dialogue and joint social action projects.

• Contact your local inter faith group. Some have dedicated youth programmes that are actively engaging young people in inter faith dialogue and activity. Find your local inter faith group at www.interfaith.org.uk/locator

• Offer to volunteer for a local or national inter faith organisation and explore internships if you want to go even further

• Get involved through other youth organisations you are involved with, such as the Scouts or Girlguiding

The National Union of Students encourages student unions to become involved in building good relations on campus: www.nusconnect.org.uk/strong-students-unions/faith-and-belief/good-campus-relations
If you are still in secondary education there are also opportunities to meet and learn about people of different faiths and to encounter them. For most young people their first awareness of different faith traditions is through religious education (RE) as part of the school’s curriculum. Most RE departments in secondary schools invite people from different faith communities to come and talk to classes. In primary schools this may happen as part of collective worship as well as RE.

Here are some things you could do:

- Ask your teacher to invite people from different backgrounds to come and speak about what their faith means to them and/or about the inter faith work that they do and the dialogues that they participate in
- See if there is an opportunity to start an inter faith group in your school
- If you belong to a faith community see what inter faith dialogue they are involved in and see if you can meet people of your own age from other faith communities in your area

To find out more about inter faith activity for young people, go to youth.interfaith.org.uk

A number of organisations that encourage and support young people to get involved in inter faith activity are Religions for Peace UK (www.religionsforpeace.org.uk), 3FF (www.3ff.org.uk) and the Inter Faith Youth Trust (www.ifyouthtrust.org.uk). There are also some which are rooted in a particular faith tradition but work more broadly, such as the Feast (thefeast.org.uk) and the Catalyst programme of the Near Neighbours Programme (www.cuf.org.uk/catalyst). The National Citizens Service (NCS) (www.ncyes.co.uk) also provides opportunities for inter faith engagement.

If you are in Scotland, contact Interfaith Scotland which has a number of opportunities for youth engagement, and also runs occasional events for young people: www.interfaithscotland.org/our-activities/young-people. For Wales and Northern Ireland, contact ni.interfaith@gmail.com and post@cytun.cymru, respectively.
If you would like to discuss these or other options, the IFN office will be happy to talk with you.

“As like-minded people working in Bolton, it is of paramount importance that we include, value and engage young people in inter faith activity. Young people play a vital part in supporting our ethos of working for peace and harmony, and building trust and respect between all our communities. Our Young Ambassadors project has given us a platform to do this work. We receive amazing and rewarding responses from our young members which make us all proud to be associated with them.”

BOLTON INTERFAITH COUNCIL

“Opportunities to engage with people from other backgrounds mostly end for many young people when they leave school. Getting involved in inter faith events and projects provides new opportunities for those who are still curious about the world to learn about others, but with the maturity that going to university or joining the working world can bring. It is vital that young people have inter faith spaces that allow them to learn and share, especially in the current context of media portrayals of faith and to make their very important contribution to inter faith cooperation.”

3FF
Women are involved at all levels of inter faith engagement in single and mixed gender contexts.

If you are seeking involvement in women-led inter faith activity or inter faith activity specifically for women, there are a number of ways to get involved.

Over the last two decades, a number of women’s inter faith initiatives have come into being, mostly developed by and for women. Some of these are short term programmes, special conversations or projects, whilst others are ongoing groups or organisations.

If you consider that women’s inter faith activity might be the best space for your needs and interests, and wish to get involved, you might:

- Contact your local inter faith group. Some local inter faith groups have dedicated women’s groups or meetings
- If you are already active in a faith community, find out more about their programmes for women – many national faith communities will have dedicated women’s programmes, projects and groups, some of which may have an inter faith dimension
- Find out whether there is a group or branch of the Women’s Interfaith Network near you
- Set up a local women’s group with members of other faiths to discuss issues that affect women of faith and generate friendship and understanding
- If you belong to a branch of a national women’s organisation, such as the Women’s Institute, you may wish to organise an inter faith event

To find out more about women’s inter faith activity contact the Women’s Interfaith Network, one of IFN’s member bodies, at info@wominet.org.uk. They run a variety of programmes and local groups dedicated to improving inter faith relations among women.

Another initiative that is encouraging women of different backgrounds to get involved in their communities and in inter faith engagement is the Religions for Peace UK Women of Faith Network (www.religionsforpeace.org.uk/about/uk-women-of-faith-network).

There are also a number of new bilateral women’s initiatives emerging, such as the Nisa-Nashim (www.nisanashim.org) group for Jewish-Muslim women’s inter faith engagement.

The IFN office may also be able to assist with information on local women’s initiatives. Call 020 7730 0410, or email ifnet@interfaith.org.uk, where someone will be happy to help.

If you are in Scotland, contact Interfaith Scotland which runs seminars, organises groups and encourages dialogue between women of faith, at admin@interfaithscotland.org.
“Engaging with women from different faiths gave me a whole new family with whom I could share life experiences, grow spiritually and made me stronger in my own faith. We became a voice for the voiceless, friends for the lonely and advocates for issues concerning women. Getting involved in inter faith engagement was truly an enlightening experience and one that I would highly recommend.”

CHAIR OF RELIGIONS FOR PEACE UK WOMEN OF FAITH NETWORK

“I became involved with women’s interfaith because I wanted to find out more about non-Muslim, especially Christian and Jewish, women. I cannot express how far my expectations were exceeded. My involvement has led to lasting friendships that have enriched my life. I would recommend all women of faith to become involved in women’s interfaith dialogue.”

For organisations

Organisations often approach the Inter Faith Network and inter faith groups with questions about engaging with people of faith, for example:

- I’m a university student. On my campus we want to develop new dialogues involving the different faith societies. Are there organisations out there that can be helpful?

- My national faith organisation has not been very involved in inter faith engagement to this point. What might we do?

- I work for a local authority and we are keen to see more opportunities for positive inter faith encounter in our area. What might that involve?

- Our business has a very diverse staff. Might it be worth starting a staff inter faith network?

The IFN office is contacted regularly by organisations that are thinking about how they can engage with faith and belief groups and encourage positive inter faith interaction. Some of the reasons they make contact are:

- To find helpful ways to ensure that the services they provide are meeting the needs of people of faith and their communities

- As part of promoting community cohesion and working for safe, resilient, just and harmonious communities

- In the context of staff welfare and ensuring good handling of religion and belief issues in the workplace

- For assistance on events or projects designed to build inter faith engagement into their work

Within this short booklet, it is not possible to go in detail into how organisations can take forward these issues but the IFN office will be happy to have an initial phone conversation and to offer suggestions for other useful contacts: 020 7730 0410 or email ifnet@interfaith.org.uk.

Many people become interested in getting more involved after taking part in an Inter Faith Week event.

Inter Faith Week began in 2009, and has now grown to include hundreds of events all over England, Northern Ireland and Wales. It is now one of the major ways that people get involved in inter faith activity for the first time.

Scottish Interfaith Week has been running since 2004, visit their website for more details: www.interfaithscotland.org/scottish-interfaith-week

Inter Faith Week takes place every year in November, usually the third week. It offers many opportunities to take part. On the Inter Faith Week website, www.interfaithweek.org you can find information, resources and much more.

Why not think about developing your own event for next year’s Inter Faith Week? The Inter Faith Week Toolkit – Developing successful activities is a helpful resource. It can be found at: www.interfaithweek.org/toolkit. The toolkit sets out some of the basic considerations you may wish to take into account when organising an Inter Faith Week event as well as giving many illustrated examples.
“Inter Faith Week is a terrific way for people to learn from one another and celebrate the tremendous amount we have in common.”

LORD BOURNE OF ABERYSTWYTH, DEPARTMENT FOR COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

“Inter Faith Week provides an excellent opportunity to get involved in inter faith activity. Many thousands of people for the first time will encounter exciting and interactive engagements where they can learn about the diversity which enriches the lives of communities across the nation. Activities are available for all ages ranging from visiting places of worship to faith festivals. Inter Faith Week is now a permanent fixture in the diversity diary of the UK.”

Local Inter Faith Organisations

There are many multi faith local inter faith groups across the United Kingdom.

Multi faith local inter faith groups are all independent bodies, including those that are members of the Inter Faith Network for the UK. All bodies known to the Inter Faith Network can be found listed at: www.interfaith.org.uk/locator

Interfaith Scotland is the best source for any additional information required on local groups in Scotland, www.interfaithscotland.org. The Inter Faith Council for Wales, www.cytun.org.uk/interfaithwales/interfaith_eng_home.html and the Northern Ireland Inter Faith Forum, www.niinterfaithforum.org, are likewise able to provide further information about local initiatives in Wales and Northern Ireland Inter-Faith Forum, respectively.

Branches of UK or national bodies

There are also some bodies which are branches or groups of national bodies. These include branches of the Council of Christians and Jews and groups of the Women’s Interfaith Network. The chart at the back of the book indicated which of the listed bodies say that they have branches.

For local branches of the Council of Christians and Jews, there is a map on their website and the office can put you in touch.

Building good relations – principles

The following principles for inter faith engagement, ‘Building Good Relations with People of Different Faiths and Beliefs’ were developed by the Inter Faith Network for the UK, with its member bodies, in 1993 and continue to be widely used both in the UK and beyond.

A printable copy of the ‘code’ can be downloaded from the IFN website at www.interfaith.org.uk/code and it is also reproduced here.

As members of the human family, we should show each other respect and courtesy. In our dealings with people of other faiths and beliefs, this means exercising good will and:

- Respecting other people’s freedom within the law to express their beliefs and convictions
- Learning to understand what others actually believe and value, and letting them express this in their own terms
- Respecting the convictions of others about food, dress and social etiquette and not behaving in ways which cause needless offence
- Recognising that all of us at times fall short of the ideals of our own traditions and never comparing our own ideals with other people’s practices
- Working to prevent disagreement from leading to conflict
- Always seeking to avoid violence in our relationships

When we talk about matters of faith with one another, we need to do so with sensitivity, honesty and straightforwardness. This means:

- Recognising that listening as well as speaking is necessary for a genuine conversation
- Being honest about our beliefs and religious allegiances

Building Good Relations with People of Different Faiths and Beliefs

In Britain today, people of many different faiths and beliefs live side by side. The opportunity lies before us to work together to build a society rooted in the values we treasure. But this society can only be built on a sure foundation of mutual respect, openness and trust. This means finding ways to live our lives of faith with integrity, and allowing others to do so too. Our different religious traditions offer us many resources for this and teach us the importance of good relationships characterised by honesty, compassion and generosity of spirit. The Inter Faith Network offers the following code of conduct for encouraging and strengthening these relationships.
• Not misrepresenting or disparaging other people’s beliefs and practices

• Correcting misunderstanding or misrepresentations not only of our own but also of other faiths whenever we come across them

• Being straightforward about our intentions

• Accepting that in formal inter faith meetings there is a particular responsibility to ensure that the religious commitment of all those who are present will be respected

All of us want others to understand and respect our views. Some people will also want to persuade others to join their faith. In a multi faith society where this is permitted, the attempt should always be characterised by self-restraint and a concern for the other’s freedom and dignity. This means:

• Respecting another person’s expressed wish to be left alone

• Avoiding imposing ourselves and our views on individuals or communities who are in vulnerable situations in ways which exploit these

• Being sensitive and courteous

• Avoiding violent action or language, threats, manipulation, improper inducements, or the misuse of any kind of power

• Respecting the right of others to disagree with us

Living and working together is not always easy. Religion harnesses deep emotions which can sometimes take destructive forms. Where this happens, we must draw on our faith to bring about reconciliation and understanding. The truest fruits of religion are healing and positive. We have a great deal to learn from one another which can enrich us without undermining our own identities. Together, listening and responding with openness and respect, we can move forward to work in ways that acknowledge genuine differences but build on shared hopes and values.

List of resources

Below are some helpful resources published by the Inter Faith Network for the UK or to which it has contributed as a partner. There are, of course, many other resources produced by IFN’s member bodies and others.

Building Good Relations

IFN works to build good relations between people of different faiths and beliefs, promoting mutual respect and understanding. In 1993, it developed, in consultation with its member bodies, guidance on Building Good Relations with People of Different Faiths and Beliefs. All member bodies subscribe to this guidance, and it has also come to be used by a number of inter faith organisations around the world. The guidance, sometimes referred as IFN’s ‘code’, was first issued as part of a consultative document Mission, Dialogue and Inter Religious Encounter published by IFN in 1993. It is reproduced in full on the previous page.

Connect: Different Faiths Shared Values

A 28 page full-colour inter faith action and resource guide for young people aged 16-25. Connect encourages young people to get involved with inter faith activity and bridge building between communities. More than ever young people are becoming aware of the importance of working to create better understanding between people of different cultures and religions. Connect aims to provide ideas and inspiration for you to get involved and begin your own initiatives.

www.interfaith.org.uk/connect

In addition, Interfaith Scotland have produced the following resource:

Interfaith Scotland – Belief in Dialogue: A Good Practice Guide

Interfaith Scotland worked with the Scottish Government to produce the following resource, published by the Scottish Government, which is also very helpful in the UK inter faith context.

‘Belief in Dialogue: A Good Practice Guide’ provides guidance on building good relations among and between religious and belief communities and individuals. It encourages people to listen to those whose beliefs are different from their own, to try to understand and appreciate them.

www.interfaithscotland.org/resources/publications/belief-in-dialogue

“The need for people within diverse communities to build strong bonds of friendship is becoming ever more critical in a world that is becoming more fractured and interfaith engagement is one of the most effective ways of building those bonds. Genuine, deep engagement challenges our prejudices and stereotypes while at the same time is life-enhancing and educative making it worth every effort to engage with people.”
